GRANT UNDER FIRE.

How the General Appeard to his Men -Two Personal Sketches, Col S. H. M. Byers in the Phila. Times While I was standing by the pontoon bridge watching the boys cross the bayou, I heard somebody cheering, and tooking round, saw an officer on Lorseback in a Major-General's noiform. He dismounted and came over to the very spot where I was standing. I did not know his face, but something told me it was Grant - Ulysses Grant, at that moment the here of the Western a my. Solid he stood erect; shout five feet eight, with square features thin, closed "ps, brown hair, brown beard both out short and neat. "He must weigh one hundred and fifty pounds; looks just like the soldier he is." I think he is larger than Napoleon, but not much-he is not so dumpy; looks tike a man in good earnest, and the rebels think he is." And this was the first time I saw Grant. I think I still possess some of the feeling that overcame me at that moment as I stood so near to one who held our lives and, porsibly, our country's in his hands. I heard him speak: "Men, push right along; close up fast and hu ry over." Two or three men mounted on mules attempted to wedge past the soldiers on the bridge. Grant noticed it, and quietly said, "Lieutenant, sen I those men to the rear." Every soldier Passing turned to gaze on him, but there was no luther recognation. There was no McCle'lan, begging the boys to allow bim to light his eigar by theirs, or inquiring to what regiment that exceedingly fine marching company belonged. There was no Pope, bully ag the men for not marchfaster, or officers for some trivial details remembered only by martinents. There was no Bonapat.e, postu ing for effect; no pointing to the Pyramids, no calling the centuries to witness. There was on nonsense, no sentiment; only's plain business man of the Republic, there for the one single purpose of getting that command across the river in the shortest time possible. On a horse near by, and among thest'll mounted staff, sat the General's son, a brightlooking lad of about eleven years. Fastened to his l'ttle waist by the broad yellow belt was his father's sword-that sword on whose clear steel was soon to be engraved Viaksburg, Spottsylvania, the Wilderness and Bichmond. The boy talked and jested with the bronzed soldiers near him, who laughingly inquired where we should camp; to which the young field marshal replied: "Over the river." Over the river! Ab! that night, we slept with our guns in our hands; and another night and another saw more than one of our division camped beyond and over the river-in that last > heard no more forever. I next saw Grant on May 18, 1863, and tala time at the battle of "Champion hills," in rear of Vicksburg. We had crossed the Mississippi river at Grand Gulf and swung off east and north; had fought the battles of Port Gibson, Raymond and Jackson, and were overtaking Pemberton's army hastening to the walls of Vicksbug. It was a very hot day, and we had marched hard, slept liftle, and rested none. Among the magnoliss on Champion hills the enemy, forty to fity thousand strong, turned en Sherman's Corps was already engaged far on the right as we approached the field in that overpowering Mississippi sun. Our bregade was soon in line, on the edge of a medow, or open field sloping toward the woods, where the enemy were conceald and steadily fireing on us, we were in that most trying position of soldiers, for regulars even-being fired on without permission to return the shots. We were standing with two files deed, bearing as patient ly as we sould not a heavy, but a stead fire from infantry, while an occasional cannonball tore up the turf in front or behind us. A good many men were falling, and the wounded were being borne to the rear of the bregade, close to an old wel', whose wooden curb seemed te offer the on'y protection from bullets on the exposed fue. "Colonel, move your men a little by the left flank," said a quiet, though commanding voice. On looking round, I saw

Immediately behind us Grant, the comman-der-in-chief, mounted on a beautiful bay mare and followed perhaps half a dozea of his staff. For some reason he dismounted, and most of his officers were sent off, bear ing orders, probably, to other quarters of the field. It was Grant under five. The the field. It was Grant under five. The rattling musketry 'nereased on our front, and grew louder too, so the left flank. Grant had led b's horse to 'he left, and thus kept near the company to which I belonged. He now sto d learing complacently against his favorite steed, smoking—ps seemed habitus! with h'm—the stump of a cigar. His was the only horsenear the line, and must, naturally, have attracted some of the enemy's fire. What if he should be killed, I thought to myself, and the army be lest without its commander? In front of us was an enemy: bebind us, and about us, and liable to overcome sud crush us, us, and liable to overcome and crush us, were his reinforcements. For days we had been away from our base of supplies, and marching a rainst our enemy's lines. What if Grant should be killed, and we be defeated here—in such a place, and at such a time? I am such a place, and at such a time? I am such a time? I was close enough to see his features. Earnest they were; but sic a of inward movement there ws; none. At was the same cool, calculating face I had seen before at the bridge; the same careful, half-cynical face I attsward saw busied with the affair of State.

E) GHTH STREET Between Washington and Commercial Avennes, adjoining Hanny's.

By an immense practice, extending through a period of years, having within that time treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to woman. I have been enabled to perfect a most potent and agreeable medicine that meets the indications presented by that class of diseases with positive certainty and exactness. To designate this natural specific compound, I have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon my own personal observation. As a close observer, I have, while witnessing its positive results in the few special diseases incident to the separate organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or erowning gem of my medical career. On its merit, as a positive, safe, and effectual remety for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly and in harmony with the laws which govern the female system, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician. Nay, even more, so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the allments for which I recommend it, that I see and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. If a beneficial effect is not experienced by the time two-thirds of the contents of the bottle, two-thirds of the medicine having been taken according to directions, and the case being one for which I recommend it, promptly refund the money paid for it. Had I not the most perfect confidence in its virtues, I could not offer it as I do under these conditions; but having witnessed its truly miraculous cures in thousands of cases, I feel warranted and perfectly safe in risking both my reputation and my money on its merits.

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked curea, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrheas. Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Back, Propapus, or failing of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing Down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Depression, Debility, Despondency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chmnic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterlity, Female Weakness, and very many other chronic diseases incident to woman not mentioned here. In all affections of this nature, my Favorite Prescription works cures—the marvel of the world. This medicine I do not extol as a cure-all, but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.
